

Those who move and find safety

In a transit center in Bosnia and Herzegovina, Fardowsa plays with her daughter, Hajera. It is a quiet moment of peace that stands in stark contrast to the eight-month journey it took to get here.

After marrying a man from a different ethnic clan, Fardowsa faced severe hostility from his family. When they learned she was pregnant, the pressure to end her pregnancy became a threat to her safety. She decided to find somewhere safe for her child.

Fardowsa gave birth to Hajera in Serbia, mid-journey. While her final destination remains unclear, Fardowsa looks at her daughter and knows that she is worth all the hardships.
